Alfresco Facebook Platform

The integration of Alfresco with Facebook delivers a platform for developing content-centric applications for Facebook. The integration makes publishing content to Facebook as controlled and effective as publishing to a corporate Web Site. The Alfresco Docs example application, built using this framework, enables collaboration and makes secure, audited, sharing of content in Facebook as simple as sharing a photo.

Employees are increasingly communicating on social-networking platforms – outside the control of the corporate IT department. Corporations must choose either to ban social software use or to harness the potential to communicate more effectively with their community of customers, partners and employees.

From an enterprise perspective, organizations must have the ability to publish to a Facebook audience as effectively as to a Web site audience. From an employee perspective, forward-looking enterprises believe that social networking provides a ready-made knowledge-management platform for their workers, which will increase adoption rates to the levels that knowledge management was always meant to achieve. Alfresco has integrated the Facebook platform, allowing enterprises content to be uploaded and shared with customers and employees in a controlled, secure and audited way.

The Alfresco Facebook Platform includes the following functionality:

- Facebook authentication integration
- Alfresco Web Script Support for Facebook Methods
- FBML Support
- Mini-feed and News Feed integration
- Access to 'My Friends' lists
